Iraqi Says 2 GIs Are Abducted

U.S. military confirms only that the soldiers are missing

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | A farmer claiming to have witnessed an attack on a U.S. military checkpoint said Sunday that insurgents swarmed the scene, killing the driver of a Humvee before taking two of his comrades captive. The U.S. military has only said the soldiers are missing.

U.S. troops, backed by helicopters and warplanes, fanned out across the "Triangle of Death" south of Baghdad searching for the missing servicemen. At least four raids had been carried out, but the captives were not found, the military said.

Snow

Another local resident said the soldiers searched houses on Sunday and promised a $100,000 reward for any information leading to the missing soldiers.

White House spokesman Tony Snow said he had no new information on the search and could not confirm if the two men were abducted. "We're still trying to ascertain their whereabouts," he told CNN's "Late Edition."

Ahmed Khalaf Falah, who said he witnessed the attack Friday, said three Humvees were manning a checkpoint when they came under fire from many directions. Two Humvees went after the assailants, but the third was ambushed before it could move. (AP)

ALCOHOL | Lake of Firewater A lake in Wielkopolska, Poland, went from being freshwater to 30 percent vodka earlier this month after a nearby distillery leaked into it, the Mirror reported. Following technical problems at the plant, chemists confirmed the alcohol level and residents crowded around Lake Bracholinskie, filling their boots with the water — which was three times as potent as wine. "If God doesn't help, everyone will be a drunkard with only a hole where the lake was," said resident Genowefa Licha. (EXPRESS) EyeOpeners | Page 2

She's Sick, All Right

A Dighton, Mass., woman who faked having cancer and spent $37,000 in donations on a vacation and jewelry was sentenced Thursday to two years in jail. Heather Faria began telling people she had stomach cancer in 2003. Friends hosted several fundraisers, including an 80k relay race that raised $9,000, after she said she couldn't pay for both food and expensive treatments. Skeptics later checked with the Dana Farber Cancer Institute, where Faria claimed to be a patient, and discovered the truth. Prosecutors said she spent the money on a vacation, a big-screen television, jewelry and cell phones. (AP)

Trouble A'Brewin'

A bomb squad in Iizuka, Japan, was called in Friday when a suspicious package was found at a police station. But it turns out the person who left the package had a different kind of blast in mind: The parcel contained only cans of beer. Police became alarmed when they noticed a suspicious box wrapped in newspaper left inside the station; the package had not been delivered in the mail. Five houses near the station were evacuated, and roads in the area were also closed, officials said. The bomb disposal team gingerly opened the box and found cans of beer inside, said authorities. Rep. McKinney Escapes Indictment for Police Attack

A grand jury declined Friday to indict Rep. Cynthia McKinney in connection with a confrontation in which she admitted hitting a police officer who tried to stop her from entering a House office building. The grand jury had been considering the case since shortly after the March 29 incident, which has led to much discussion on Capitol Hill about race and the conduct of lawmakers and the officers who protect them. Episcopalians Elect Woman Leader

American church makes global history in controversial choice

COLUMBUS, OHIO | The Episcopal Church on Sunday elected Nevada Bishop Katharine Jefferts Schori as the presiding bishop of the denomination, making her the first woman to lead any church in the global Anglican Communion. It was another groundbreaking and controversial move for a denomination that consecrated Anglicanism's first openly gay bishop just three years ago.

Standing before cheering delegates to Episcopal General Convention, Jefferts Schori said she was "awed and honored and deeply privileged to be elected." Outgoing Presiding Bishop Frank Griswold was at her side as she was introduced after closed-door balloting.

WELCOME WAGON: Katharine Jefferts Schori, left, the newly elected leader, shakes hands with members of the House of Deputies after her confirmation vote Sunday.

The choice of Jefferts Schori may worsen — and could even splinter — the already difficult relations between the American denomination and its fellow Anglicans.

Episcopalians have been sparing with many in the 37 other Anglican provinces over homosexuality, but a female leader adds a new layer of complexity to the already troubled relationship. Placing a female bishop at the head of the denomination could further anger conservatives worldwide and even within the U.S. church.

Only two other Anglican provinces — New Zealand and Canada — have female bishops, although a handful of other provinces allow women to serve in the post. Still, there are many Anglican leaders who believe women should not even be priests.

Jefferts Schori was elected at the Episcopal General Convention, where delegates have been debating whether to appease Anglican leaders by agreeing to temporarily stop ordaining gay bishops.

In 2003, the Americans shocked the Anglican world by electing the first openly gay bishop — V. Gene Robinson of New Hampshire. Jefferts Schori was among those who voted to confirm Robinson.

Climbers Injured In 500-Foot Fall

PORTLAND, ORE. | Three climbers near the top of Oregon's highest peak fell 500 feet Saturday morning; two were seriously injured.

The trio were part of a few parties climbing on the 11,240-foot Mount Hood, when something went awry. They fell backward, hitting other climbers below them, officials said.

Aaron Dunlop, 31, of Newberg, and Jeremy Hawkins, 32, of Tigard, were airlifted off the mountain by a National Guard helicopter, officials said.

The two had "head and back injuries, going in and out of consciousness, very serious," said Clackamas County sheriff's Detective Jim Strovink.

They were in fair condition Saturday night at Oregon Health & Science University Hospital in Portland, officials said. (AP)

NASA Plans July Shuttle Launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, FLA. | NASA managers on Saturday picked July 1 to launch the first space shuttle in almost a year, despite recommendations against a liftoff attempt by the chief engineer and safety offices.

The decision to launch Discovery on a trip to the international space station was made after two days of closed meetings by NASA's top managers and engineers at the Kennedy Space Center. The flight would be only the second shuttle mission since the 2003 Columbia disaster.

During a poll of top staff, representatives from NASA's Office of Safety and Mission Assurance and the Office of the Chief Engineer recommended against flying until further design changes are made to the external fuel tank. The dissenting managers ultimately didn't object to making a launch attempt, NASA officials said. (AP)

Bush Wary of Polls on Iraq

White House says it won't let public opinion sway handling of war

WASHINGTON | President Bush understands there is growing U.S. concern over his handling of the Iraq war but will not rely on polls to determine when to withdraw troops, his spokesman said Sunday.

"The president understands how a war can wear on a nation," White House press secretary Tony Snow said. "Whatever the bleakness is, whatever the facts are on the ground, you figure out how to win. You can't do that by reading polls. ...

"Most people realize simply pulling out would be an absolute, unmitigated disaster," Snow said.

Meanwhile, Sen. Dianne Feinstein of California said she and other Democrats would introduce a resolution this week calling for a phased withdrawal, noting that Bush signed a defense bill last year calling for that in 2006.

"Three years and three months into the war, with all of the losses, the insurgency, the burgeoning civil war that's taking place, an open-ended time commitment is no longer sustainable," Feinstein said on

CNN's "Late Edition."

After three years of war, approval of Bush's handling of Iraq has dipped to 33 percent, a new low, and his overall job approval rating was 35 percent in a new AP-Ipsos poll. The war has brought a U.S. death toll of 2,500 and a price tag of $320 billion.

Snow, speaking on three Sunday talk shows, said Bush has confidence the new Iraqi government under Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki will take on a greater role in the coming months to deal with unrest and sectarian violence in the region. (AP)

Doctors say they're the largest family to have preventive surgery to protect themselves from hereditary stomach cancer. (AP)

Book: Al-Qaeda Planned Gas Attack

Terrorist network was 45 days away from hit on New York subways

NEW YORK | U.S. officials received intelligence that al-Qaeda operatives had been 45 days from releasing a deadly gas into New York City subways when the plan was called off by Osama bin Laden's second-in-command in 2003, according to a book excerpt released Sunday on Time magazine's Web site.

According to the investigative report by Pulitzer-prize winning journalist Ron Suskind, an informant close to al-Qaeda management told U.S. officials that Ayman al-Zawahri canceled the plan in January 2003, despite the likelihood that the strike would have killed as many as on Sept. 11.

The informant said that operatives had planned to use a small, easily concealed delivery system to release hydrogen cyanide into multiple subway cars. U.S. officials had already discovered plans for the device in the computer of a Bahraini jihadist arrested in February 2003, and they had been able to construct a working model from the plans.

A New York Police Department spokesman said authorities had known of the planned attack. "We were aware of the plot and took appropriate precaution," Paul Browne said Saturday.

According to the Time report, President Bush was shown a model of the weapon in March 2003 and ordered alerts sent through the U.S. government. (AP)

Gas Execs Defend Pricing

Firms say high costs at pump essential to maintaining supplies

WASHINGTON | Americans paying $3 per gallon at the pump have it relatively cheap when compared with prices globally, say oil and gas company executives who defend their record profits as essential to maintaining supplies.

In parts of Europe and elsewhere in the West, gasoline prices are more like $5 per gallon to $7 per gallon, said the chairman of ConocoPhillips Co., James J. Mulva.

"This is a global business, and it's not only that we need to add to supply, but we need to reduce demand," Mulva said. "In the United States alone, we have about 2 percent of world oil reserves, 5 percent of the population and yet we use about 25 percent of the world's consumption of oil."

Mulva and two other executives who appeared on NBC's "Meet the Press" said they are optimistic about keeping a lid on domestic prices, unless their fears come true about the potential for damage to U.S. energy production from the hurricane season that began June 1.

Though many U.S. consumers blame high pump prices on oil companies greedy for profits, the oil company chiefs blame global competition for supplies.

"If we didn't have this level of profitability, I don't think we could get the supplies to where they need to get to," said the president of Shell Oil Co., John Hofmeister. He emphasized that the companies are seeking greater access to federal lands and offshore waters for exploration.

O'Reilly said "profits are in the midrange" and not as high as they could be, but that if prices were to decrease, the demand for oil and gas would increase and supplies could become short. JOHN HEILPRIN (AP)

CRIME SCENE: Five young men were shot and killed in a sport utility vehicle early Saturday at the intersection of Danneel and Josephine streets in New Orleans.

Police Find No Leads in New Orleans Shooting

Big Easy searches for clues in deadly gunfire that killed 5 teenagers

NEW ORLEANS | Detectives knocked on doors Sunday in a search for anyone with information on the killings of five teenagers gunned down in a blaze of semiautomatic gunfire.

Police had no new leads to the killers, said police Capt. John Bryson. "We're begging citizens — anyone who may have any information whatsoever to call Crimestoppers," he said.

Bryson acknowledged it would be difficult finding witnesses to the killings early Saturday near the city's central business district.

No motive had been confirmed, but "just the sheer carnage of it, the location of it and the time that it occurred" make drugs or revenge likely candidates, Bryson said.

A semiautomatic weapon was used and "multiple, multiple rounds" were fired, authorities have said.

The dead were Reggie Dantzler, Iruan Taylor and Marquis Hunter, all 19, Arsenio Hunter, 16; and Warren Simoen, 17, all of New Orleans, John Gagliano, chief investigator for the Orleans Parish coroner, told The Times-Picayune. JANET MCCONNAUGHEY (AP)

Lawmakers Push Sugar as Possible Source of Fuel

WASHINGTON | With the market for corn-based ethanol booming, lawmakers from sugar-producing U.S. states are hoping that beet and cane growers can soon jump onto the renewable fuel bandwagon.

They cite the model of Brazil, which produces ethanol made from sugar cane. Critics, pointing out that sugar is much cheaper in Brazil than in the United States, question whether the economics of sugar-based ethanol would work in America.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is expected to issue a long-awaited study around July 1 on the viability of converting sugar into ethanol.

Sugar in the U.S. is made from two sources: beets in some northern and western states, and cane in a few southern states, including Hawaii. FREDERIC J. FROMMER (AP)

BEIJING

Authorities Rush to Clean Up Toxic Coal Tar River Spill

Chinese authorities said Sunday a toxic coal tar spill flowing down a northern river had slowed, as they rushed to stop it from reaching a reservoir that serves a city of 10 million and is a standby source for the 2008 Olympic Games. Dams, cotton quilts, and pumps helped slow the sludge's downstream flow, so that it traveled just 1 mile down the Dasha River over the last 42 hours, the official Xinhua News Agency reported. (AP)

Government Forces Blamed For Attack on Tamil Villagers

Tamil villagers, terrified by an approaching Sri Lankan government patrol, sought shelter Sunday in the same church where they say soldiers fired on them a day before, and elsewhere at least three police died in a blast blamed on Tamil Tiger rebels. The government denied killing civilians, blaming the Tigers for the attack, as the island nation appeared to edge even closer toward all-out civil war. (AP)

Afghan Offensive Kills 90 Militants

Southern blitz aimed at quelling signs of a Taliban resurgence

KABUL, AFGHANISTAN | Taliban militants killed five people in an ambush Sunday while U.S.-led coalition troops moved deeper into Afghanistan's southern mountains in an offensive that has killed about 90 insurgents in less than a week, officials said.

More than 10,000 U.S.-led troops have spread out over four southern provinces as part of Operation Mountain Thrust, a counterinsurgency blitz aimed at quelling a Taliban resurgence.

Taliban militants ambushed a convoy carrying a former provincial chief in Helmand on Sunday, killing him and four bodyguards, said Ghulam Mohiudin, the governor's spokesman. Police and coalition forces in nearby Zabul province also killed two militants, while two wounded insurgents were arrested, provincial police chief Noor Mohammad Paktin said.

Afghan soldiers — along with U.S., Canadian and British troops — are spreading out over Helmand, STEP BY STEP: U.S. soldiers take cover as a Chinook helicopter takes off in Helmand province in southern Afghanistan on Sunday.

Uruzgan, Kandahar and Zabul provinces to hunt down Taliban fighters blamed for a recent surge in ambushes and bombings.

More than 500 people have been killed in the past month as insurgents, primarily Taliban, have stepped up attacks against coalition and Afghan soldiers.

In the past week, coalition officials said an estimated 85 other insurgents were killed in the offensive, the largest anti-Taliban military campaign undertaken since the former regime's 2001 ouster in an American-led invasion.

Military officials say the surge in fighting appears to be an attempt by the increasingly bold Taliban to seize more power in the south while the government's influence remains weak and as U.S.-led troops prepare to transfer the regional command to NATO troops. TINI TRAN (AP)

N. Korea May Be Set for Missile Test

SEOUL, SOUTH KOREA | North Korea vowed Sunday to increase its "military deterrent" to cope with what it called U.S. attempts to provoke war, amid signs the country was preparing to test a long-range missile that could reach the continental U.S.

North Korea has not fired a long-range missile since August 1998, when it sent a rocket flying over parts of Japanese territory.

But signs of a launch have grown in recent days, with reports saying a missile has been assembled on the North's eastern coast and may have been fueled for launch. (AP)

Catalonia Backs Autonomy Plan

BARCELONA, SPAIN | The wealthy semiautonomous Catalonia region gained sweeping new powers to run its own affairs Sunday, as voters overwhelmingly approved a blueprint that some fear could leave

Spain's government cash-strapped and powerless.

Nearly three out of four voters said "yes" to the plan in a binding referendum that culminated more than two years of heated debate.

Among issues at stake in the voting in this region were a much bigger slice of tax revenues collected in Catalonia. (AP)

'Doomsday' Seed Vault to Be Built

Arctic repository will ensure crop diversity in event of catastrophe

OSLO, NORWAY | It sounds like something from a science fiction film — a "doomsday" vault, dug into a frozen mountainside deep in an Arctic island's permafrost that will serve as a Noah's Ark for world seeds in case of a global catastrophe.

But Norway's ambitious project is on its way to becoming reality with the start of construction Monday of the Svalbard Global Seed Vault, designed to house as many as 3 million of the world's crop seeds.

Prime ministers of Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland and Iceland were to attend the cornerstone ceremony Monday near the town of Longyearbyen, in Norway's remote Svalbard Islands, roughly 620 miles from the North Pole.

Norway's Agriculture Minister Terje Riis-Johansen has called the vault a "Noah's Ark on Svalbard."

Its purpose is to ensure survival of crop diversity in the event of plant epidemics, nuclear war, natural disasters or climate change, and to offer the world a chance to restart growth of food crops that may have been wiped out.

The seeds, packaged in foil, would be stored at such temperatures that they could last hundreds, even thousands, of years, according to the independent Global Crop Diversity Trust. The trust has also worked on the project and will help run the vault, which plans to start accepting seeds from around the world in September 2007. (AP)

Lock and key: The more than 100 nations that have endorsed the vault's construction say it will be the most secure facility of its kind in the world | Today, A Section

U.K. Hospital Mulls Face Transplants

LONDON | A British surgeon plans to offer partial face transplant surgery to four patients — less than a year after French surgeons pioneered the technique, a London hospital said Sunday.

The ethics committee of London's Royal Free Hospital will make a decision Wednesday on a request from plastic surgeon Peter Butler to carry out the operations at the hospital, spokesman Neil Hubands said. The patient selection process could take up to a year, he said. (AP)

City I.D. Theft Investigated

Officials question how D.C. workers' personal information was stored

WASHINGTON | A laptop containing the Social Security numbers and other personal data of 13,000 city employees and retirees has been stolen, officials said. The computer was stolen Monday from the Washington home of an employee of ING U.S.

Financial Services, said officials with the company, which administers the district's retirement plan. The company did not notify city employees of the theft until late Friday because it took officials several days to determine what information was stored on the laptop, ING spokeswoman Caroline Campbell said. The laptop was not password-protected and the data were not encrypted, Campbell said.

The company said it was working with district police and had hired a private investigator. Police would not confirm the theft Saturday. City officials said they were disturbed about how the data were stored and that the company waited to report the theft. "We are concerned that this information was being managed without protection," said Mary Ann Young, spokeswoman for the city's chief financial officer. (AP)

Journalist's Death Is Cause for EMT Firing

Report criticizes the care of a beaten New York Times reporter

WASHINGTON | An emergency medical technician who responded to the fatal attack on New York Times journalist David Rosenbaum has been fired after a report detailing critical mistakes in Rosenbaum's care. D.C. Fire Chief Adrian H. Thompson fired the EMT on Friday night, hours after the release of the report from the District of Columbia inspector general's office, said Vincent Morris, a spokesman for Mayor Anthony A. Williams. The report criticized emergency workers and hospital employees for improperly assessing and treating Rosenbaum and police for failing to conduct a proper investigation. The Washington Post, citing government sources, identified the worker as Selena Walker, who drove the ambulance that took Rosenbaum to Howard University Hospital. Walker's firing was first reported by The Washington Times. (AP)

HELP DESK: Job growth in information technology has been slower than previously thought, new data find. From March 2004 to February 2006, the high-tech sector has added some 88,600 jobs — less than one-quarter of the roughly 400,000 jobs lost during the three previous years.

MTV Gets the Urge

Music channel teams up with Microsoft for downloading service

TECH TEST | It's hard to tell where MTV Networks Inc.'s new URGE online music service starts and where Microsoft Corp.'s new Windows Media Player 11 software ends, and that's no accident.

The two companies worked together to make MTV's foray into online music a seamless extension of Windows Media Player, blurring the lines between the music you own and the music you rent.

The result makes for an easier browsing experience overall, with smoother transitions between the songs available through the online service and what's stored on your computer and portable players.

The public test, or "beta," version of URGE launched last month. While it can be accessed through the Windows Media Player 10 built into Windows XP, it's worth the free upgrade to the next-generation media player. It will be standard in Windows Vista, Microsoft's next-generation operating system due out in January.

PLUGGED IN: Like its rivals, MTV Networks Inc.'s new URGE online music service offers individual downloads for 99 cents.

The media player incorporates Vista's emphasis on less menu clutter and more visual elements, such as larger album cover images.

URGE's most distinguishable features play off its relationship to MTV Networks' stable of channels, including CMT and VH1.

Want to know who appeared on MTV's pop showcase "TRL" yesterday? Click on the show's link on URGE and you can get a rundown, plus links to download the artists' own music.

Like its rivals, URGE sells individual downloads for 99 cents and full albums starting at around $9.95. The service also offers unlimited downloads for $9.95 a month, or $14.95 for the ability to transfer songs to any of more than 100 compatible portable music players — but not Apple Computer Inc.'s iPod.

I found URGE simple to use and a good fit with Windows Media Player 11, but something that could really set it apart from other services isn't yet available — namely exclusive music recorded on MTV shows like "MTV Unplugged."

MTV says it plans to eventually offer that, in addition to music videos for download. ALEX VEIGA (AP)

Software Goes for a Test Ride

NEW MEDIA | There's a new online playground for folks who like trying new software and cutting-edge technologies.

SonicSolutions Inc. has launched its Roxio Labs Web site, where the public can try a variety of new media applications and offer suggestions for improvements.

Some of the software will be free, though paid versions might be sold later, the company said.

Among the first batch of programs is MyTV ToGo, which allows consumers to transfer television shows recorded on TiVo Inc. or Microsoft Corp. Windows Media Center PCs to portable media players and Web-capable cell phones.

The RoxioLabs.com site is similar in concept to Google Labs, which features beta versions of applications created by Google Inc. But Sonic's offering features emerging technologies from third parties, not just its own developers.

Sonic said products that do well on the site will be able to later use Sonic's retail and distribution channels. MAY WONG (AP)

U.S. Is Proud of Team's Tie

Americans brought attitude, confidence to the field, Arena says

WORLD CUP | Heart. Courage. Grit. Determination. Never has the U.S. soccer team sounded so proud of a tie.

Then again, never before had the Americans earned a World Cup point in Europe, as they did in an improbable roller-coaster of a game against world power Italy.

"They brought an attitude to the field and a confidence that allowed them to be successful yesterday," U.S. coach Bruce Arena said Sunday, a day after the historic — and grueling and tantalizing — 1-1 tie.

For nearly the entire second half Saturday night, the United States labored with nine men against Italy's 10, following the rapid-fire ejections of one Italian player, then two Americans.

Carlos Bocanegra, right, celebrates the U.S.'s goal on Saturday, the first of the Cup.

The wide-open play left players drained. They got back to their hotel at about 3 a.m., and Arena gave his players the day off Sunday.

Monday it will be back to work, with Ghana on their minds.

The United States (0-1-1) can advance to the second round from Group E if it beats Ghana (1-1) on Thursday and Italy (1-0-1) defeats the Czech Republic (1-1). There are several other improbable combinations, but all hinge on a U.S. victory.

Brazil Remains Shaky In Win Over Australia

Defending champions take spot in the second round with 2-0 victory

WORLD CUP | Brazil again couldn't stage the show everyone has been expecting. And it still grabbed a spot in the second round with a shaky 2-0 win over Australia.

Adriano got the first goal in the 49th minute and the defending champions hung on. It was one goal more than the score Brazil beat Croatia by in its opener — but the South Americans were even less impressive this time.

AMERICA'S CUP

What does it mean for the U.S.?

If the Americans can manage to advance to the second round (still a big if), then they will most likely have to face powerhouse Brazil.

Adriano, right, scores Brazil's first goal in the team's 2-0 win over Australia.

Brazil advanced with its ninth straight World Cup victory. The five-time champion hasn't been eliminated in the first stage since 1966.

Adriano used a left-footed shot from the top of the penalty area after clearing a defender. His low shot whipped past Australia goalkeeper Mark Schwarzer.

Reserve Fred, who came on for Adriano in the 88th, got the clinching goal a minute later on a rebound into an empty net. TALES AZZONI (AP)

Park Ji-Sung
MIDFIELDER, KOREA

The Manchester United midfielder capped a furious Korean rally with an alert 81st-minute chip over the French goalkeeper, giving his team a 1-1 tie. The point gives Korea, and the World Cup's best fans, an excellent chance to advance past the group stage for the first time on foreign soil. In the 2002 World Cup in Korea, the team made it to the semifinals.

Penalty Kick Save Preserves 0-0 Tie for Japan vs. Croatia

Croatia couldn't find the net and even missed a penalty kick in a tie with Japan that endangered both teams' stays at the World Cup. Each side had numerous chances to win, but spectacular goaltending left the teams with just one point apiece with one match remaining. Even worse for the Japanese, they must still play Brazil. Japan captain Tsuneyasu Miyamoto took down Dado Prso in the penalty area in the 21st minute. But Yoshikatsu Kawaguchi denied Darijo Srna from the penalty spot, diving to his left to stop the low shot. (AP)

FIFA Ensures Togo Will Play

A long-running pay dispute that threatened to mar Togo's first trip to the World Cup was settled Sunday after FIFA intervened to persuade the players to stop a planned boycott of a crucial match against Switzerland. "It's settled. It's finished," midfielder Thomas Dossevi said. "We are now going to concentrate on soccer." He said that FIFA had underwritten guarantees by the Togolese federation that the players would receive bonus pay they had long been asking for. (AP)

France Scores, but Korea Forces Tie

WORLD CUP | France finally got a goal, didn't get a win and now is in danger of another early exit from the World Cup.

Thierry Henry scored France's first World Cup goal since the 1998 final, only to see South Korea's Park Ji-sung tie it in the 81st minute in a 1-1 draw Sunday.

South Korea tops Group G with four points, with France in second place. Third-place Switzerland has one point and plays Togo Monday. The French might need a win against Togo in their final game of the first round to advance. (AP)

Geoff Ogilvy Takes Open

Mickelson blows late lead in quest for third straight Major title

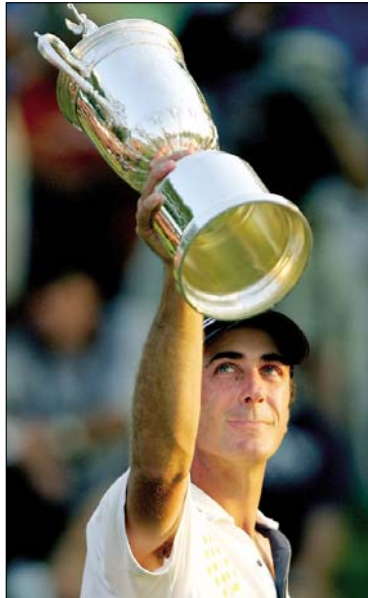

GOLF | Phil Mickelson's bid for a third consecutive major ended with a shocking collapse Sunday when he bungled his way to a double bogey on the final hole, giving the U.S. Open to Geoff Ogilvy.

The winning shot in this test of survival at Winged Foot was Ogilvy's 6-foot par putt that he figured was only good for second place.

The memory will be Mickelson on the 72nd hole, one minute on the verge of joining Tiger Woods as the only players over the last 50 years with three straight majors, the next minute looking like the Mickelson of old with a reckless attempt to get out of trouble.

"I still am in shock that I did that. I just can't believe that I did that," Mickelson said. "I'm such an idiot."

Ogilvy, whose resiliency carried him to the Match Play Championship in February, closed with a 2-over 72 in the highest-scoring U.S. Open since 1974 at Winged Foot. He became the first Australian to win the U.S. Open since David Graham in 1981.

Geoff Ogilvy, left, hoists the U.S. Open trophy after a stunning win. Meanwhile, Phil Mickelson waits to putt on the 18th after losing a two-shot lead with four to play.

"I feel for Phil," Ogilvy said. "He's won a few majors recently, so I can take one away."

Ogilvy certainly did his part.

Battling to the very end, the 29-year-old Aussie holed an 18-foot chip to save par on the 17th hole, and then got a miserable break on the 18th hole when his tee shot landed in a divot. His approach lost power as it reached the green, tumbling down the slope. Unlike two other players before him — Colin Montgomerie and Jim Furyk — Ogilvy made the putt.

Even so, this was Mickelson's major to win, and the first one he threw away.

He had a two-shot lead with four holes to play, but the stubborn side of him continued to hit driver, and his miscues finally caught up with him. Mickelson hit only two fairways in the final round, none on the back nine.

For Redskins, It's All in the Family

Team is talking Super Bowl after offseason of chemistry-building

REDSKINS | On the way to the locker room after a hot, sweaty minicamp practice, two Washington Redskins linemen stopped to talk about bowling.

"Santana Moss is pretty good," guard Derrick Dockery said. "Derrick Frost, David Patten, myself."

From Tuesday bowling outings to barbecues to offseason workouts, this Redskins team says it has bonded like no other, building a Joe Gibbs-inspired chemistry that has coach and players talking openly about the Super Bowl.

"It gets better and better with Gibbs back," said guard Randy Thomas, who recently hosted some 40 players, family and friends at his house for a cookout. "Actually, it's more family-orientated. ... You can't point one guy out that you wouldn't go fight for."

The team wrapped months of spring workouts this weekend with a three-day minicamp. Five weeks of vacation loom ahead of the July 30 reporting date for training camp, yet many players avoided the temptation to race out of town immediately and instead planned a team get-together Sunday night.

"I'm excited to come to work because I can hang out with a bunch of my buddies," tight end Chris Cooley said.

The camaraderie has coaches and players feeling they can build off last year's playoff appearance and win the NFL title. After all, Hall of Fame coach Gibbs, who already has three Super Bowl rings, didn't come out of retirement just to go 10-6. JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Nats Win With Walk-Off

Zimmerman's homer gives Washington the series over Yankees

NATIONALS | All of 21, a big league rookie, Ryan Zimmerman quickly developed a reputation for being calm as can be, never allowing anything to rattle him.

Jammed by a fastball from Yankees starter Chien-Ming Wang in the seventh inning Sunday, Zimmerman had one thought as he stepped to the plate with one out in the bottom of the ninth, his Washington Nationals down by a run: Let's hope he tries throwing that same pitch, because I'm ready for it.

Sure enough, with Yankees closer Mariano Rivera forced into a day off, Zimmerman drove Wang's 107th pitch of the day over the wall in left for a game-winning, two-run homer. Having lifted Washington to a 3-2 victory over New York, his Dad in the stands on Father's Day, Third baseman Ryan Zimmerman celebrates his ninth-inning home run, a blast that gave Washington its second consecutive comeback win over the Yankees.

Zimmerman morphed into a kid on a sandlot, raising a fist as he rounded first, then tossing off his batting helmet as he rounded third.

Zimmerman jumped into the bouncing crowd of teammates waiting at home plate, celebrating a second consecutive comeback win over the Yankees. He said he'd never done that before, at any level: "No walk-off nothing — single, anything."

"I looked pretty bad the at-bat before on that same pitch," the third baseman said. "I figured I was going to look for that same pitch first pitch, and if he threw it, try and do some damage with it." (AP)

Orioles Slammed By Wright, Mets

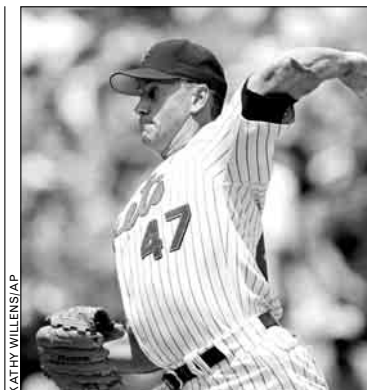

ORIOLES | After a two-day hiccup, the New York Mets got back to winning behind David Wright and their sensational subs.

Wright hit a grand slam and drove in five runs, Tom Glavine became the first 10-game winner in the National League and New York beat the Baltimore Orioles 9-4 to avoid a three-game sweep.

"I think that this was important," Wright said. "I think it's important to not get complacent."

The Mets, who own a 9½-game lead in the NL East, haven't lost three straight all season. They are 18-8 in their last 26 games.

Research Study Trying to Improve Depressive Symptoms Quickly

Several medications are effective for treating depression; however, they take weeks or months to achieve their full effects. NIMH is studying whether a drug can cause a rapid antidepressant effect in patients with bipolar or unipolar depression. The study also tries to see if it can sustain the results with another medication in certain patients. Understanding how this works may help us understand depression and design better antidepressants. NIMH is seeking people ages 18-65 with depression (unipolar or bipolar) who are:

- Free of other serious medical conditions
- Willing to participate in a minimum of a 12-day inpatient stay

Research medications provided free of charge.

Compensation and transportation reimbursement is provided.

Len Bias: A Legacy Denied

Two decades after his death, fans still wonder what might have been

BASKETBALL | When he completed his extraordinary basketball career at Maryland, the only question surrounding Len Bias was whether he would dominate the NBA in the same fashion he ruled the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Twenty years later, many still wonder.

Bias appeared destined for greatness when the Boston Celtics selected the 6-foot-8 forward with the No. 2 pick in the 1986 NBA draft. The plan was for Bias to team with future Hall of Famer Larry Bird for a few years, then take over as leader of pro basketball's most storied franchise.

"It's a dream within a dream," Bias said that night. "My first dream was just to play in the NBA. To get drafted by the world champions is an extra one."

Len Bias, ACC player of the year in 1985 and 1986, died 20 years ago today at 22.

Two nights later, on June 19, 1986, Bias died of cocaine intoxication. He was 22.

"The news of his death was tragic, as he would have been an amazing professional player after his college career," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said recently. "It was a sad day for the entire sport of basketball. We lost one of the best players of that era."

Bias averaged 16.4 points per game at Maryland and won the ACC player of the year award in 1985 and 1986.

"I have said many times that the two most difficult opposing players to prepare for in my time in the ACC were Michael Jordan and Len Bias," Krzyzewski said. "Len was a gifted player. He was special, and our league has had a lot of great players." DAVID GINSBURG (AP)

Cup's Back in Carolina for Game 7

NHL PLAYOFFS | The Carolina Hurricanes staggered home Sunday, trying to figure out how it has gone so wrong, so quickly.

Just a few days ago, they were one goal away from winning their first Stanley Cup. Now, they're trying to avoid a giant collapse against the resurgent Edmonton Oilers, who suddenly seem much fresher, a step or two quicker and a lot more determined.

Only one team has squandered a 3-1 lead in the finals. Sixty-four years ago, Detroit actually won the first three games against Toronto, only to lose the next four.

The 1942 Red Wings also are one of three teams that jumped out to a 2-0 lead and didn't win the cup.

The Hurricanes put themselves in position to join those infamous teams with a 4-3 overtime loss at home — on a short-handed goal, no less — and a dismal 4-0 defeat at Edmonton in Game 6 on Saturday night. Now, it's on to the winner-take-all finale. Game 7 is Monday night in Raleigh. (AP)

AN INFINITE SET OF MIRRORS: Live from Los Angeles, it's "Studio 60 on the Sunset Strip," an NBC show about an NBS show.

Comic Autopsy

Two new fictional TV shows go behind the scenes of one real one

NARCISSISM | When NBC's fall schedule was announced last month, two of its half-dozen new series stood out: the Tina Fey-starring comedy, "30 Rock," and the Aaron Sorkin drama, "Studio 60 on the Sunset Strip."

Their common denominator? Each takes a look behind the scenes at a sketch-comedy show not unlike NBC's own "Saturday Night Live." Jointly, "Studio 60" and "30 Rock" are reaching new heights in network narcissism: One-third of NBC's freshman slate is about NBC.

Even though the pilot for either series isn't yet approved for review, in their current versions both look promising — and then some: Maybe they foreshadow a whole new age of media self-involvement.

"Studio 60 on the Sunset Strip" is a richly filmed hour with a large ensemble cast. The pilot begins with a clash between a network censor and the executive producer of the show-within-the-show, "Studio 60" — a live late-night series that seems different from "SNL" principally in that it airs from Hollywood on Fridays on the National Broadcasting System.

The producer loses his power play. Moments before airtime, the politically sensitive sketch he was fighting for is yanked.

Stepping in front of the camera and halting the action, he warns viewers, "It's not going to be a very good show tonight and I think you should change the channel."

Eventually, he's cut off. Then he's fired.

How to save the show and redeem the network? NBS' president (Amanda Peet) has a brainstorm: Sign the brilliant bad-boy writing partners (Matthew Perry and Bradley Whitford) who were canned from "Studio 60" years earlier, then got big making movies.

Could "Studio 60 on the Sunset Strip" be taken as a tacit admission of guilt and a silent act of contrition by NBC for, hmm, one transgression or another?

"30 Rock" hits even closer to home. The title of this zany single-camera comedy refers, of course, to 30 Rockefeller Plaza, the Manhattan address of NBC Universal and corporate parent General Electric — and, like the real-life "SNL," home to "The Girlie Show," a live sketch-comedy program whose head writer is Liz Lemon (played by Fey, herself an "SNL" veteran).

Skewering yourself in bigger, cleverer ways than your critics can? Turning satire into product plugs and cross-promotion? Embarking on a new course of strategic narcissism? If so, "30 Rock" and "Studio 60" could really be hot.

Keeping the Music Pure

Alexi Murdoch is still trying to recover from his one big hit

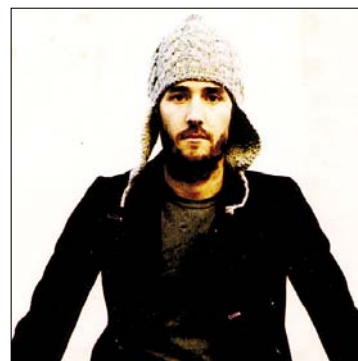

MUSIC | There is a perception in certain music circles that rejecting overtures from major record labels is the highest mark of integrity.

In that case, Alexi Murdoch is a paragon of virtue.

Major labels have spent the past few years courting the Los Angeles transplant, largely on the strength of his song "Orange Sky." The somber tune appeared on soundtrack albums for the movie "Garden State" and the TV shows "The O.C." and "Ladder 49," and was featured in a car commercial last year. Aside from those soundtracks, "Orange Sky" was available only on "4 Songs," an EP that Murdoch, 32, recorded himself and sold mostly at gigs, which he played infrequently.

One imagines a similar concern drove Murdoch's decision to release his first full-length record, "Time Without Consequence," on his own Zero Summer label.

The album is 11 tunes that are quietly emotional, as Murdoch sings about making sense of life in a manner reminiscent at times of Nick Drake. The songs are mostly built around Murdoch's guitar, although he credits an impressive cast of supporting musicians. "Time Without Consequence" also includes a version of "Orange Sky," although it has more percussion and piano.

"Time Without Consequence" an appealing album that shows there's more to Murdoch's music than a mere four songs. ERIC R. DANTON (THE HARTFORD COURANT)

COMEBACKS | Keren Woodward and Sara Dallin have experienced quite a bit in their 25 years together as Bananarama. Originally a trio (Siobhan Fahey left the group in 1987), Bananarama has scored numerous international hits, including "Shy Boy," "He Was Really Sayin' Somethin'," "More Than Physical" and "Robert DeNiro's Waiting." Steeped in dance pop rhythms, the duo's ninth studio album, "Drama," was released last month by Lab/Fuel.

REALLY SAYING SOMETHING: The good times aren't over for the pop duo.

Do you feel that you have to give a lot more to have a hit today?

SD: Absolutely. You have to be at the opening of every bloody thing. It's become so commercialized. It's a nightmare.

What has most changed in the music industry?

SD: Anybody can become a star today. On the pop side, it's not really about how much talent you have, but how much money and support you have behind you.

Do shows like "American Idol" and "Pop Idol" help or hurt?

SD: It's funny. The beauty for those who win is that the people behind the show, in a way, then own them. So, the winning talent knows that money, and the promotional push, will be there for them.

The album includes the Solasso remix of your 1982 hit, "He Was Really Sayin' Somethin'" which was a No. 1 club hit in Europe. Did this catch you off guard?

KW: Absolutely.

SD: I could never get past the fact that the vocals sounded so great [on the remix]. In those days, when we originally recorded the song, our vocals were a bit rough — not always in tune. But that was part of the charm. MICHAEL PAOLETTA (BILLBOARD)

'30 Days': It's a Timely Experiment

TRADING PLACES | A member of the Minuteman group and a family of illegal immigrants are paired in a reality series aimed at giving people a chance to see life from a different perspective. The episode of the FX series "30 Days," from documentarian Morgan Spurlock, is scheduled to air Aug. 2. In it, a man identified only as Frank shares a one-bedroom apartment in Los Angeles with a Mexican family here illegally. Spurlock's series debuts July 26. (AP)

Television

A STORYBOOK ENDING: Jodie Sweetin — the forgotten “Full House” starlet — is coming back to TV. The 24-year-old claims to be fully recovered from methamphetamine addiction and, beginning July 18, will host a reality TV show tastefully titled “Pants-Off Dance-Off.”

A Mom’s Anguish

In ‘A Girl Like Me,’ a family must cope with a son’s secret

GENDER | Last seen on “Entourage,” Oscar-winner Mercedes Ruehl stars in “A Girl Like Me: The Gwen Araujo Story” (9 p.m., Lifetime). Based on a tragic and true story, Ruehl plays Sylvia, a single mother in a close-knit Latino family in Northern California. They have a hard time accepting her divorce from her abusive husband, so it’s a real shock when they begin to suspect that her son, Eddie (J.D. Pardo), is a little bit different.

COME AS YOU ARE: J.D. Pardo portrays Eddie/Gwen Afauju in “A Girl Like Me.”

Eddie is a sweet and considerate child and a comfort to his mother. But he stirs things up at age 7 when he decides to dress as a girl at a family picnic. Sylvia’s patience is tried when he puts on makeup and his sister’s clothes and insists that he is a girl named Gwen. Sylvia’s emotional turmoil and her battles to resist, understand and finally accept Eddie/Gwen’s decision are the center of the film. Sadly, Gwen’s story is not a long one. While clearly a “message” movie about tolerance and acceptance, “Girl” is at its best and most honest when depicting the reactions of Sylvia and her family — the dread, embarrassment and confusion they feel when confronted with Eddie’s secret life. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

ON TV TONIGHT

IT MEANS A LOT ... HOW MUCH?
HISTORY DETECTIVES (9 p.m., PBS) returns for a fourth season. An academic relative of “Antiques Roadshow,” this is the series where people take beloved keepsakes or family legends to have their veracity appraised.
GRILLING THE CONTESTANTS
Spatulas fly on two installments of HELL’S KITCHEN, beginning at 8 p.m. (Fox).
NOT A DISC JOCKEY!
Religious fanatics trade homes with an atheist disc jockey on WIFE SWAP (8 p.m., ABC).
SUMMER VIEWING BOTH YOU AND ROVER CAN ENJOY
Cesar Milan helps various four-legged and two-legged neurotics over a three-hour helping of THE DOG WHISPERER

The owner of this Houdini poster asks the “History Detectives” if it’s genuine. (8 p.m., National Geographic).
CULT CHOICE
A banker’s wife (Natalie Wood) becomes a burglar in the 1966 comedy misfire “PENELOPE” (10 p.m., TCM), co-starring Dick Shawn and Jonathan Winters. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Plaque Attack

Enigmas

The cryptic message of the 'Toynbee tiles' remains a mystery

Unless you're hunting for them, the peculiar markers embedded in the streets of downtown St. Louis don't draw much attention. For those who do notice, the words make little sense.

The shoe box-sized marker reads: "TOyNBEE IDEA IN KUBrick's 2001 RESURRECT DEAD ON PLANET JUPiTER." The plaques, numbering more than 100 and found on dozens of city streets across the U.S. and in three South American countries, present a riddle that may never be solved: What on Earth — or on Jupiter — does English historian Arnold J. Toynbee have to do with filmmaker Stanley Kubrick and with raising the dead?

St. Louis has three "Toynbee tiles." Kansas City has one. Philadelphia, where many believe the strange practice of stamping the message on city streets began, has more than a dozen. A plaque in Santiago, Chile, lists an "A. Toynbee" and a Philadelphia address, which, while real, provided no solution.

Some have called the markers the urban equivalent of crop circles. Others say they're just quirky underground graffiti. No one has ever been caught or taken credit for this caper, which dates back to at least the 1980s.

Toynbee.net is dedicated to mapping and discussing the phenomenon that has left people puzzled in New York, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Atlantic City, Boston, Washington, Chicago, Indianapolis, Detroit, Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro.

Chris Clark went to the site after she stumbled across the plaques in St. Louis. "The pleasure of these plaques is not so much in the solution and 'whodunit,'" Clark said. "It's hearing the wild theories and stories that surround them."

Some have tried to make the connection to Kubrick and "2001: A Space Odyssey." Internet searches return a load of theories, but the connection with the late filmmaker is vague, at best.

"The meaning of the message on the tiles is pretty open-ended," said Justin Duerr, a Toynbee-tile fanatic from Philadelphia. "You can draw a lot of connections between the two, depending on how far out you want to stretch it."

Another variation reads: "TOyNBEE IDEA IN MOVIE 2001 RESURRECT DEAD ON PLANET JUPiTER." Sometimes,

THE X-TILES: This aging Toynbee plaque is embedded in the street at the corner of Market and Eighth streets in St. Louis.

“I don't believe there's a lone gunman. ... I like to look at it as art that exists for a reason other than being in an art gallery.”

JUSTIN DUERR
TOYNBEE-TILE FANATIC

there are other cryptic messages as well.

In 1983, an article in The Philadelphia Inquirer told of a man named James Morasco who said Toynbee's theory of bringing dead molecules back to life on Jupiter appeared in Kubrick's 1968 film. Many have argued that no such reference exists, though Jupiter is indeed part of the movie.

In the late 1990s, Duerr became obsessed with the plaques. Last year he developed resurrectdead.com to document the tiles, and he plans to make a movie on the subject.

Duerr said even after Morasco's death in 2003, new plaques appeared in Philadelphia and elsewhere. At one time, the tiles could be found on every other block. Many have since been paved over or worn down to nothing by traffic.

Many of the plaques look identical, as if made with a cookie cutter. Others change the wording slightly and take on a colorful style of their own. Some include political messages.

One Web site reported a Toynbee tile in Pittsburgh that offered instructions on how to make the plaques using several layers of linoleum and glue. Another tile reads, "You must make and glue tiles!"

That was enough to persuade Duerr to make a tile of his own and slap it to a street in Philadelphia. He said his version looks almost like the others. His actions present the most obvious explanation: Other people were intrigued enough by their encounter with the tiles to make their own in various cities.

Duerr said there's even a name for such behavior: A meme, pronounced "meem," meaning a cultural action that is transmitted and repeated.

"I don't believe there's a lone gunman," Duerr said. "I like to look at it as art that exists for a reason other than being in an art gallery."

Hell Falls Off the Map

Theology

Belief in heaven and its counterpart is waning in America

Belief in hell is going to you-know-where. And belief in heaven is in trouble, too. That's the concern of some Christian thinkers, including Jeffrey Burton Russell, an emeritus professor of history at the University of California, Santa Barbara, and author of the new book "Paradise Misland: How We Lost Heaven and How We Can Regain It."

Russell isn't impressed by fads like the girl's name Naveah (heaven spelled backward) or polls that show most Americans believe in some sort of heaven.

The problem, according to Russell and others, is that the way U.S. Christians conceive of heaven and hell is so feeble and vague that it's almost meaningless. It's "not that heaven is deteriorating," he says. "But we are."

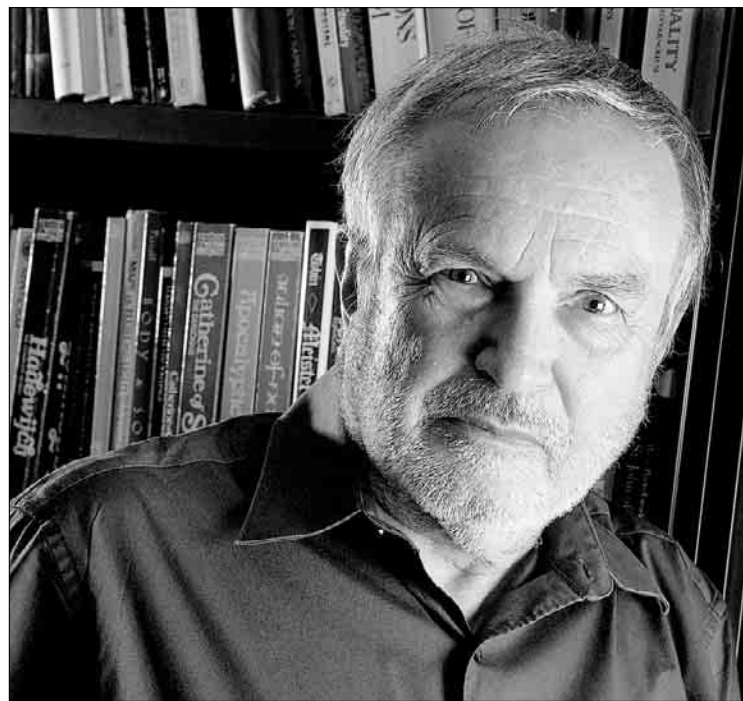

“There’s a tendency to over-dramatize hell in order to get [it] across to people. ... [It’s simply] the absence of God.”

JEFFREY BURTON RUSSELL
AUTHOR

Gallup reported in 2004 that 81 percent of Americans believed in heaven and 70 percent in hell. An earlier Gallup Poll said 77 percent of ever-optimistic Americans rated their odds of making heaven as "good" or "excellent." Few saw themselves as hellbound.

"The percentage who say they believe in heaven has remained pretty constant the past 50 years, but what people mean by it has changed an awful lot," Russell said. Some people are so confused they believe in heaven but not God — "I suppose a New Age thing," he said.

But if today's notion of paradise

Russell thinks the modern concept of heaven and hell has become far too vague.

is off base, then what's the best way to think of heaven?

"For Christians, basically, heaven underneath all of the decorations means living in harmony with God and the cosmos and your neighbors and being grateful," said Russell. To him, it's healthiest to see heaven as starting on earth, not an existence that "suddenly happens when you die."

What about hell? "There is a tendency to over-dramatize hell in order to get [it] across to people," he said, but it's simply "the absence of God, the absence of heaven."

Russell's book is a heartfelt appeal against "physicalism," the modern claim that knowledge comes only through the physical senses and empirical science. Such an outlook is arrogant and unprovable, Russell believes, because it ignores humans' moral sense and the supernatural — including heaven and hell.

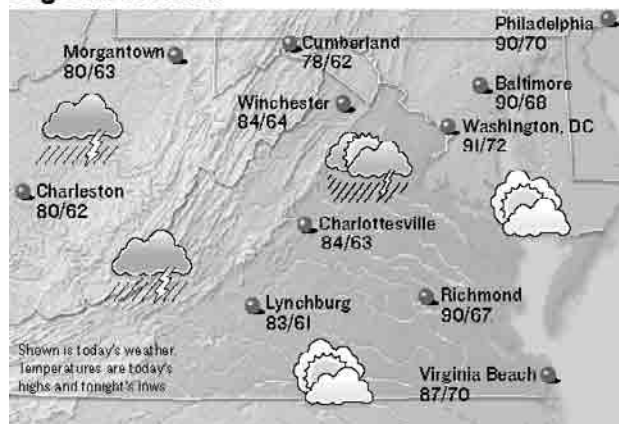

In Catholicism, the Second Vatican Council (1962-65) declared that persons who do not know the Christian gospel but sincerely seek God "can attain to everlasting salvation." The church decided that requiring explicit Christian faith was too pessimistic, said Cardinal Avery Dulles, writing in First Things magazine. But now, he cautioned, "thoughtless optimism is the more prevalent error," with many Christians mistakenly assuming that "everyone, or practically everyone, must be saved."

Christians are permitted to "hope that very many, if not all, will be saved," Dulles said. Still, the New Testament teaches "the absolute necessity of faith for salvation" and says that each of us faces just two possibilities, either "everlasting happiness in the presence of God" or "everlasting torment in the absence of God." for Richard Griffith's performance. The inspirational story of Frankie Valli and The Four Seasons in "Jersey Boys" won four Tonys, including Best Actor for John Lloyd Young and Best Musical.

The black dress swept the look of the evening, but details, like the belts seen on Marcia Gay Harden and Rita Wilson and wrap fronts like Oprah's stunning black satin gown, set the dresses apart. Other black-suited beauties included Glenn Close, Jaime Lynn Sigler in a deep v-neck black number and Bernadette Peters, who sported a princess-like one-shouldered black gown with heaping fabric.

Presenter Julia Roberts couldn't score a nomination for her panned performance in "Three Days of Rain," but wowed the audience in a black plunging-neck gown with an open back.

Cyndi Lauper arrived in a swanky black suit, a popular look among the award's male attendees, except for actor Josh Lucas, who wins the award for fashion-risk-gone-right for his tailored, gray pinstripe suit with blue shirt and tie.

The fashion-risk-gone-awry award goes to British Actor Alan Cumming for his equestrian-punk inspired ensemble of riding boots with a tailored white blazer topped with gold-and-black piping. Only Elisabeth Withers-Mendes, clad in an ostentatious tiered floral dress with green and pink tulle sash, could steal Cumming's thunder.

The Ladies In Red, actresses Anna Paquin, Kristen Bell and Kyra Sedgwick in a slimming apple-red gown with voluminous bottom, all opted for different hues of red, adding a touch of color to the sea of black.

The award for best colorful duo goes undeniably to Oprah's gal-pal Gayle King and actress Alfre Woodard, who showed up in the same busy but beautiful gown in a waterfall of orange and yellow chiffon.

Line up for This One

Another company has taken on the challenge of liquid eyeliner. TARTE'S INDELIBLE WINK combines a liquid liner and a powder tip; you apply the liner, then trace the powder across the line to set and soften it. It's easy to apply a smooth, even line, and the formula has admirable staying power. The powder tip is a nice idea, but it takes some practice to master. On first try, our tester was so intent on drawing an even line that she rubbed away the entire stripe. With practice, though, she adapted her technique to produce a slightly smoky, not-to-heavy eye.

Tony Awards

Let's hear it for the boys — the "Jersey Boys" and "The History Boys," that is, who stole the show at the 60th annual Tony Awards, at New York City's Radio City Music Hall last week. Equally exciting: The pre-show that is the red carpet, which gave rise to its own fashion winners and losers.

"The History Boys," a sardonic dissection of British education directed by Alan Bennett, took home six Tonys, including Best Play and Best Actor in a play, Kyra Sedgwick, left, was one of the many actresses who arrived in red gowns. Best Actress winner Cynthia Nixon donned a simple white gown with a brooch.

Riders: Stop the Music

UNDERGROUND SOUNDS | The prospect of musicians and other performers invading the Metrorail system is still a hot topic. Readers sent Express a number of comments on Metro's proposal to possibly lift the ban that keeps musicians and performers away from stations. Some have focused their ire at DAN TANGHERLINI, Metro's new interim general manager.

One e-mailer writes: "Mr. Tangherlini obviously misses the point of Metro. It is in business to transport people, not to entertain them. If I want entertainment, I will buy a ticket to an event of my choice and not be held hostage to music that someone else has chosen. ... Please, keep the platforms silent."

Others said they'd like musicians and performers to liven up their otherwise dreary commutes. Most other cities allow busking in some format.

Another e-mail: "In regards to music on the Metro, I think it is a great idea. It would give our stations a little character and not make my commute as bland as it is now. ... It's great that we now have a Metro head who thinks beyond the box."

One reader points out that there are already some musicians performing in areas adjacent to stations: "I had no strong opinions about buskers until this morning, when I heard two musicians playing 'My Favorite Things' on electric guitars loudly and erratically at the L'ENFANT [PLAZA] Station. Please, no

Live Online

Lisa de Moraes

Washington Post television columnist LISA DE MORAES, was online Friday to discuss Britney Spears' interview on "Dateline." | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

In your opinion, what was the most bizarre moment of the whole Britney interview? And did you happen to catch the part when she was on the verge of crying and her voice lowered about two octaves?

Creepiest moment definitely was when she started explaining away all those baby incidents, like the fact that Starbucks was just five minutes away so it's OK that she was driving with baby in her lap and besides, her daddy used to let her drive his car while sitting in his lap. Who told her that was going to play well out in TV-land?

I was just trying to eat my toast when the Spears interview shows up on "Today." My goodness. Has she fired all her minders? My question: What was the point of the interview? To ask for a break from the paparazzi? To show the country that she is as much of a wreck as the mags say she is?

Who knows? I'm guessing she's using the same handlers as Tom Cruise is these days. She gained nothing by doing that interview. I, on the other hand, was extremely entertained.

Am I the only one who came away from "Dateline" hating Matt Lauer even more than ever and feeling sorry for Britney? I can't stand the way he asks these stupid questions and acts like he's a real reporter.

I thought he did a pretty good job considering he was interviewing someone who appears to have the common sense of hair.

What do you think of "Gameshow Marathon?"

Concept is great — but got lost in execution. I think CBS producers took it way too seriously. And Ricki Lake is a terrible choice to host.

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You may be claiming just a bit too much for yourself. You must be sure to share what is yours with those who are not as fortunate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's not going to take you long to get started, but, when the time comes, you may not want to stop. Discipline is the key.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Now is the time to commit yourself to one thing or another; it won't do for you to split your time between the two any longer.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Security is an issue, as well as safety in and around the home. Take your cue from someone who has minimized personal dangers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You will receive an important hint regarding career opportunities. You won't want to limit yourself; tomorrow, you'll make a choice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Your own generosity will work wonders for you — even as it works wonders for others.

True cooperation can be achieved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Annoyances are not to be avoided; the more willing you are to address them directly, the more likely you are to avoid them later.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Give yourself credit for those things that come under your responsibility. You've been a little too willing to be overlooked lately.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) It's important that you forward all messages in a timely fashion — and as accurately as you possibly can. Remember to write things down.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Now is the time for you to swing into action. A loved one will be counting on you. You may have to disappear only to come back stronger than ever.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Subtlety is not likely to prove your forte — you needn't think you'll stand out inappropriately. Do what you must to progress.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is a good day to work for richer and more lasting friendships. If you find yourself at the workplace, do what you can to cooperate.

Metro Drill Sergeant Needed

READING THE LETTERS CRITICIZING the new Metro voice reminds me why I prefer my college town in North Carolina to my home town in the D.C. area. If anything, WMATA should have hired actor/drill sergeant R. Lee Erney to do the voice. Maybe that would get the flip-flop wearing coffee-drinker I saw standing in the doorway to move in under four door-closing attempts.

—RICHARD SHAYEGAN
Bethesda, Md.

Voice Not the Real Problem

IT IS OBVIOUS THAT NO ANNOUNCEMENT, whether aggressive or demure, is going to stop people from blocking the doors on Metro. There are too many people and too few doors, aggravated by many riders who have yet to figure out that you can't squeeze more people onto a car until you let the ones inside get off. So, there are people still trying to get off and on when the doors close. If Metro would focus on running trains and busses instead of providing entertainment, they might correct poor planning and design problems.

A Namibian tourism official said Saturday he may have been duped into believing that BRITNEY SPEARS was considering having her baby in Namibia. Deputy Environment and Tourism Minister Leon Jooste said he made his original public statement after receiving a phone call from the United States on Monday. "Somebody told me that she is interested in coming to Namibia and that they would contact me in the next two weeks," he said Saturday. But the connection was so bad, he said, that he never got a name or contact information for the person. Still, Jooste went public with the information.
